PART I · THE AUDIT LETTER

A NOTE IN THE MARGIN OF ONE'S OWN BOOK

The quarterly self-audit is a private letter — one signed and countersigned by the same hand, with the patience of a ledger and the honesty of a mirror.

This is the fifth quarterly audit of the book, and the first to open with no red flag. Position sizing held inside the self-set bound on every day of the quarter; the largest single name peaked at 9.2% of NAV on one session, still below the 10% ceiling.

Cash reserve sat between 14% and 22% throughout, comfortably above the self-set floor of 10%. Trading frequency ran at 1.8 closes per week, near the trailing four-quarter baseline. The observation journal carries an entry for every closed lot, with one gap of two sessions noted in early March.

Two yellow flags are opened this quarter. First, the watchlist has grown to 41 names without a pruning pass. Second, dividend receipts were posted to the ledger within two weeks rather than the standard three sessions.

The book's pattern this quarter is one of quiet composure. Mistakes were of omission, not of commission; none of them were structural. The audit closes with the observation that the habits most worth keeping are the ones least easily seen.

This letter is a self-reading of the account's surface. It names no future and claims no insight beyond what the statements already quietly confirm.

PART II · TEN-POINT LADDER

THE CHECKLIST, WALKED WITHOUT HURRY

Ten questions, answered in plain prose. Each row carries a green, yellow, or red flag and a one-line note — the audit's compact alphabet.

NO	QUESTION	ANSWER	FLAG	NOTE
01	Is position sizing within observed bounds?	Yes — largest single position peaked at 9.2% of NAV.	GREEN	Inside the 10% self-set ceiling on every session.
02	Has any single position exceeded 10% of NAV?	No exceedance recorded.	GREEN	Concentration stayed below the self-set bound.
03	Are stop-observation levels documented?	Documented for all 14 open positions.	GREEN	Journal entries tagged with level and rationale.
04	Is cash reserve above the self-set threshold?	Yes — between 14% and 22% across the quarter.	GREEN	Floor of 10% held comfortably.
05	Has trading frequency increased beyond baseline?	1.8 closes per week, near trailing 4Q baseline of 1.7.	GREEN	No meaningful acceleration observed.
06	Are observed losses documented with context?	Eight closed lots at a loss; each with a journal note.	GREEN	Context includes thesis, exit reason, lesson field.
07	Has the watchlist been pruned this quarter?	Watchlist at 41 names; last pruning pass 140 days ago.	YELLOW	Pass overdue — schedule in the next fortnight.
08	Are broker statements reconciled?	Reconciled to the cent through the quarter-end cutoff.	GREEN	Alpaca and KIS statements matched to the ledger.
09	Are dividend receipts recorded?	Eight events recorded, two with posting lag beyond three sessions.	YELLOW	Recording lag is a small process hygiene item.
10	Has the observation journal been updated?	28 entries this quarter; one two-session gap in early March.	GREEN	Gap noted and closed with a retrospective entry.

PART III · FLAG QUAD

AUDIT NOTES

On sizing
The 10% single-name ceiling is self-set; the book ran with head-room throughout.

On watch-list hygiene
Pruning pass is overdue by roughly ninety days — the single item worth the next session.

On journal continuity
One two-session gap in early March, closed retrospectively. Continuity is a habit, not an event.

On reconciliation
Both broker statements matched to the cent through the quarter-end cutoff.

PART IV · EDITORIAL

WHAT THE MIRROR DOES NOT SEE

A single sentence to hold in mind, and a short list of things this audit was never meant to verify. The honest boundaries of a private practice.

An audit is a mirror held quietly — not a judge's bench.

— THE AUDIT VOICE —

WHAT THIS AUDIT DOES NOT VERIFY

TAX CORRECTNESS	Filings, withholding, and allowable deductions sit outside this ladder.
REGULATORY COMPLIANCE	Broker-side rule compliance is assumed, not checked row by row.
FUTURE CONDUCT	A self-audit records the quarter past, never the one ahead.
PERSONAL INTEGRITY	Honesty is a prerequisite of the exercise, not its output.
MARKET OUTCOMES	The account owns the decisions; the market owns the weather.
