PART I · SELF-REVIEW

WHAT THE THREE MONTHS WERE MADE OF

A quiet letter to the person who made the decisions. Six paragraphs, one hand, no verdict. Numbers sit in the margin; prose holds the page.

To the reader, once removed — myself —

Three months, in the hand. The quarter opened with the market reading its own quiet — a stretched week of thin prints, a calmer second week, and then the sort of mid-quarter acceleration that looks, in the book, like momentum and, on the tape, like catching up. I watched. I did little. The doing, when it came, came later.

Position changes were fewer than the quarter before. Semiconductor weight held at a little over a quarter of the book through the period. Consumer discretionary was trimmed in February — a small reduction, not a closure — on a reading that exit pace was outrunning the thesis I had written down. The adjustment was clean; the reasoning was dated; the execution took ninety seconds. That is not a strategy. It is a habit.

The largest single-day drawdown of the quarter printed on the Thursday in mid-March. It was 2.1% on the book. I remember the morning because I had slept poorly the night before and opened the screen later than usual. The book recovered by the following Tuesday. The note I wrote to myself on the Thursday afternoon — two sentences in the running file — is the record that no Sharpe ratio preserves. I keep the note.

What I misread, I misread at the edges. I read one small position as a story of operating leverage and the thesis I had written, three lines long, required a footnote on customer concentration that I had read in October and then, quietly, stopped reading. The position is still in the book, at a smaller weight. I have not closed it. I have reread the footnote. These are the decisions that do not appear in a P&L column. The P&L is where the decision lives. The decision is not where the P&L lives.

The habits held, with one exception. Monthly rebalance on the last trading day — kept. Reading on Saturday mornings — kept, except for the one Sunday evening in February I chose instead to finish a book, and the Tuesday that followed it was my least clean trading day of the quarter. The reading is not superstition. The reading is the shelter. I note the exception. I do not punish the Sunday.

Quarters end. Observation continues. There is nothing to claim here, and no conclusion I would put in italics if I were writing for anyone else. I am writing for the person who has to make the next ten decisions. That person will be, again, me.

In observation,

PART II · DECISION LADDER

TEN DECISIONS, IN THE ORDER THEY WERE MADE

Each row is a single decision kept in the quarter's log. Rationale columns are descriptive — factual record, not a directive.

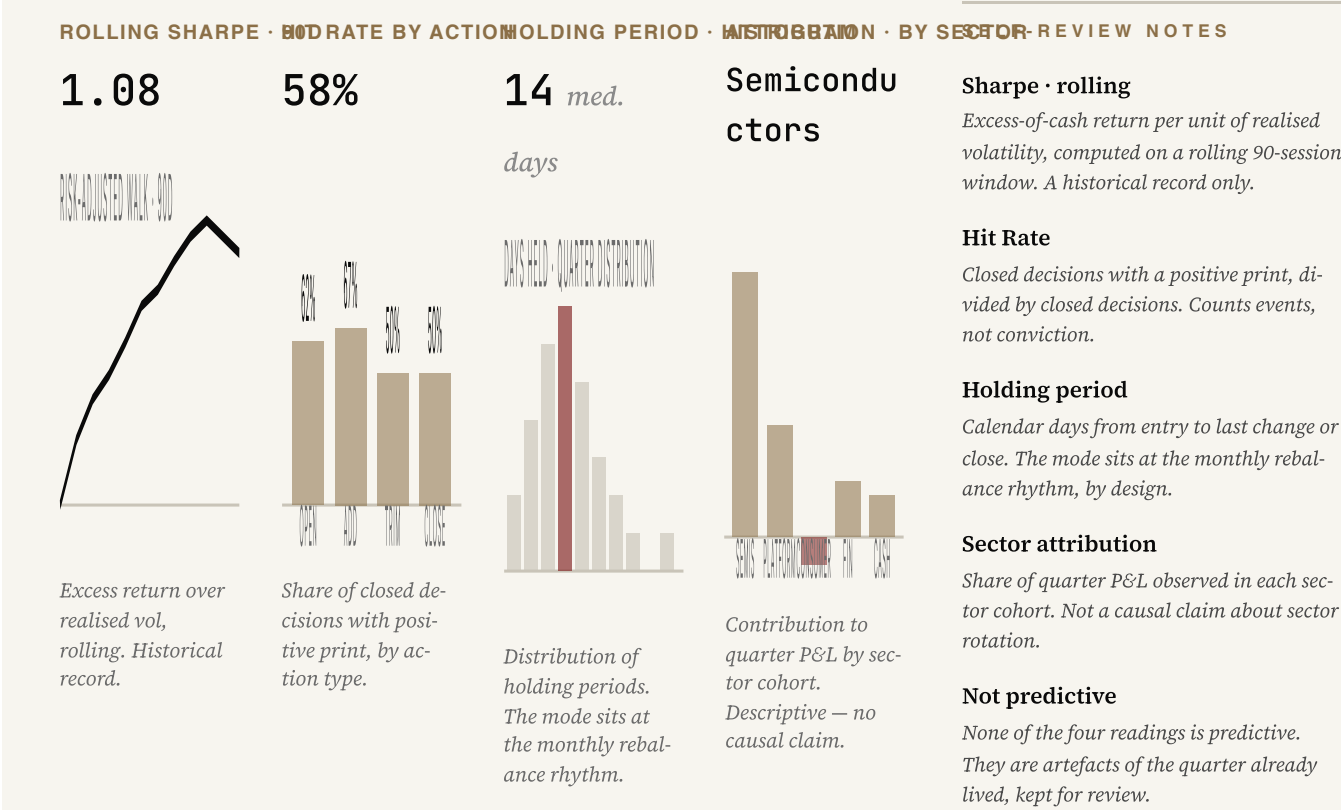

DATE	ACTION	NAME	WEIGHT Δ	RATIONALE (DESCRIPTIVE)	P&L TO DATE	TRAJECTORY
2026-01-08	OPEN	NVDA	+4.2pp	Sizing per plan	+12.40%
2026-01-14	TRIM	TSLA	-1.8pp	Position size reduction	-2.10%
2026-01-22	ADD	AAPL	+2.0pp	Rebalance per plan	+5.80%
2026-02-04	OPEN	AVGO	+3.0pp	New thesis entry	+9.10%
2026-02-11	TRIM	XLY	-2.4pp	Sector weight reduction	+1.20%
2026-02-19	CASH	CASH	+2.4pp	Cash buffer increase	+0.40%
2026-02-27	ADD	MSFT	+1.5pp	Rebalance per plan	+3.20%
2026-03-06	CLOSE	NKE	-2.2pp	Thesis marked stale	-5.80%
2026-03-14	OBSERVE	BOOK	+0.0pp	Drawdown day (-2.1% print)	-2.10%
2026-03-27	REBAL	BOOK	+0.0pp	Monthly rebalance (per plan)	+0.60%

Ten decisions in the order made. Bronze end-dot marks the most recent read on each row. Rationale column is the quarter's own written record.

PART III · DIAGNOSTIC QUAD

FOUR READINGS AROUND THE QUARTER

Four dimensions sampled over the same ninety-day window. Small multiples, quiet grids, and a note column on the right — what these readings are, and what they are not.

PART IV · EDITORIAL

WHAT A QUARTERLY REVIEW IS AND IS NOT

A single sentence the desk is holding in mind at quarter's end, and a short inventory of the questions this document cannot answer.

Self-review is the small hinge on which large habits turn.

— PIVOXQUANT · QUARTERLY DESK —

WHAT THIS REVIEW CANNOT SETTLE		WHAT THIS REVIEW DOES RECORD
01	Tax consequences of the quarter's closed positions.	01	Ten decisions, in the order they were made.
02	Personal liquidity events not visible in the book.	02	Four diagnostic readings over the 90-session window.
03	A regime shift that falls outside the 90-session sample.	03	Three margin notes — Sharpe, beta, turnover.
04	Private decisions made for reasons not written down.	04	One largest single-day drawdown, with its date.
05	Any outcome of decisions not yet made.	05	One written sign-off, to the person who made the quarter.
